

Universal Human Values

exploring motivations and meaningfulness in learning

Learning Through Values
with Lifeworlds Learning

Values - some key points

- Schwartz identifies 58 values organised into 10 values groups.
- We are all capable of acting on all of these values, but we choose to prioritise certain values in our lives.
- Values are related to one another in proximity and in opposition.
- Values exert a significant influence on our goals, attitudes and behaviour.
- We organise values through frames to make sense of the world as we experience it.

What are your values?

How do you engage with values in learning?

For further support, resources, training and ideas contact:

Rob Bowden - 07814 873402

www.lifeworlds.co.uk